Introduces New Menu to Support Residents With Alzheimer's Disease

Regular, nutritious meals may become a challenge for people with Alzheimer's disease or dementia. As part of the progression of Alzheimer's Disease, many people lose the ability to use utensils.

Weinberg Campus has introduced a new accommodation to allow people with dementia to be as independent as possible during meals. To make the most out of their abilities, residents at Garden House, Weinberg's assisted living community, can now enjoy bite-sized foods that are easy to pick up. Serving finger foods helps residents enjoy their meals and meet nutritional requirements.

Weinberg Campus offers a peaceful, low-stress environment and a complete progression of care for residents that need memory support. By overlapping a wide range of programs and services, residents enjoy the fullest choices for their changing memory care needs. Our specially designed Campus provides safety and security, while our Care Team is trained in memory support in a manner that helps individuals celebrate each moment.
